Mary MacLeod, Darius McCall & Shirley Panek*

In the scruffy Uptown section of Chicago, Arthur Przybyszewski, still runs the donut shop his father founded before he was born. Arthur is besieged by a new Starbucks across the street, his aged hippie sensibilities, and the recent death of his ex-wife. His store reflects the state of his mind, ill-tended, marred by the vandalism of a disgruntled ex-employee and slipping into bankruptcy. A new employee urges him to revitalize the store by opening evening hours for poetry readings. Franco Wicks is a young, enterprising writer whose intelligence and energy nudges Arthur's torpid spirit into new life, especially when Franco is nearly killed by thugs seeking to collect his gambling debts. You'll find this lively play uplifting and deeply funny as you meet Arthur, Franco and the people around them struggling to make something good of their lives.

Superior Donuts contains mature themes, language and violence.*
