Our 65th season opens with an intriguing comic mystery by Britain's master of farce. A young woman redirects her fate when she encounters an old man in a hotel suite. After he confesses to the murder of his two wives, she inadvertently stumbles into a hidden room in the suite. When she emerges, it's 20 years earlier and she comes face to face with his second wife on the very night of her murder! The women struggle to understand what has and will happen if they fail to stop this chain of events, time-travelling even further back to warn the first wife!! Sound confusing? Not in Ayckbourn's hands. His twisting plot is spiced with comedy and, at the end, a heart-warming turn that will leave you smiling, wondering and happy.

Communicating Doors contains suggestive dialogue and therefore is not recommended for children.
