The first in our American Standard series takes place in 1941, before Pearl Harbor drew America into World War II. After 20 years away, Sara, daughter of a privileged southern family, returns home from Europe with her family. Her German husband, Kurt has become intensely involved in the anti-fascist efforts opposing the rise of Hitler. Eventually he'll need to return to Germany to continue his underground work, but not before he's recognized by a family house guest. The violent outcome of that discovery shocks the sheltered American family out of their ignorance, bringing home the struggle that is going on in Europe.
