In this touching tragi-comic memory play (winner of the Tony Award for Best Play in 1999), playwright Warren Leight draws from his own experience as the son of a jazz side man. With a perfect mix of pathos and humor, the fictional Clifford Glimmer narrates the story of his father, Gene Glimmer, a gifted trumpet player whose career parallels the decline of jazz from its peak in the early 1950s to its relative obscurity in the rock-and-roll decades that followed. Along the way we hear the increasingly fractious story of Gene and Terry, Clifford's woefully mismatched parents.

Approximate running time: 90 minutes.
